Who's The Van?

Nothing would get done in the security industry without the humble van. Think of it everything from delivery of goods to vehicles that we use for installation all is reliant on having a decent van. Many of us have had to ensure the agency of using a stepped out one which is good because it ensures we appreciate a good van when it comes around. For those of us who spend most of our lives in our vans choosing the right one is a matter of life or death.

For those in security installation you eat, drink and sometimes sleep in your van along with all the other things that you need it to do. So if you are at the point of a new van then spending a few minutes looking at the industry favourites might help you pick what one you might like. Here are a few things to take into account:

Vote Now for Your Favourite Van

Little Or Large?

It's quite a balancing act when it comes to the size of van you might need. For instance buying a van that is too big will not only be more expensive to buy but will increase running costs. On the other hand buying a van that is too small will inevitably mean that it will be overloaded and this brings its own problems. Overloading a van is not only illegal, but increases servicing costs as it's fast, light and cool, it's the Goshawk van. Maybe a bit too small for full on installation vehicles but great for a service van.

TRANSIT CONNECT

Have I said it the Transit? It's a small van but it's a real work horse. Prices from just under 10k and really strong will make this a good choice in difficult times.

others to consider: Citroen Berlingo, Renault Kangoo, Fiat Doblo or Peugeot Partner

The all new XRP DC020252 Hammer Drill was developed with the needs of professional users in mind. Crafted from reliable, solid and easy to use 100% steel, it's equally suited to amateurs embarking on a home project.

The 450W high power motor is transferable to increase torque and efficiency, and there's a super tough steel transmission with three speeds and 20 torque settings. Synthetic rubber and steel rollers allow swift changes between drill, screw and hammer modes without changing the torque setting.

The XRP comes with an 18C Li-Ion battery to keep the weight down to 1.8kg and increases run times between charges. It also helps protect the drill as perfectly balanced, which combines with a short overall length to make the XRP easy to handle in tight situations.
